Jeff Doughten is one of the most remarkable people I've ever known. If ever a teacher was in the profession for the "right" reason, he has to be the one.

It's for the students, always the students. He would do anything for them—literally anything— and they knew it because he demonstrated it so many times in so many ways. It's no wonder he has left in the wake of his great career hundreds, possibly thousands, of former students whose lives have been greatly enriched by his boundless efforts and dedication.

Jeff told me on more than one occasion that he saw his job as something akin to a ministry. To be sure, winning first divisions was incredibly important to him, and he won so many I suspect even he has long since lost count, but shaping young lives and setting them on a count of the saw his job as something

-Martin J. Shannon in The Wall Street Journal WHEN the St. Patrick's Day parade gets under way in Dublin, it is the Americans who dominate it. In March 1977 the first blare of music was "San Antonio Rose" from the Pampa, Texas, high-school band, and the first marchers behind the head of the parade were 250 Boston policemen. Altogether, about two dozen U.S. bands and marching units took part. It is the same every year. "We don't usually do much on St. Patrick's Day, ourselves," a Dublin priest said. "It's always wet, and people generally sit at home and watch television-football, horse races, and sometimes the big parades in the American cities." -Roy Reed in New York Times

In tribute to American veterans of all branches of service, the national ensign is flown daily, 8 a.m. to sunset, on board the ex-USS Missouri (BB 63).

USS Missouri played a crucial and unforgettable role in defense of America in three wars spanning more than four decades. The battleship's support of America's military forces was just as vital in the Gulf War of 1991, as it was in the Pacific Theatre 46 years earlier. The USS Missouri's place in America's history was forever immortalized as the site of the September 2, 1945 signing of the Instrument of Surrender ending World War II.

Dear Mr. Doughten,

Thank you for the discipline and responsibility that I attribute to the strong musical background obtained in high school. You enforced strict discipline, attendance policies, and a high qualit ethic. Mr. Doughten, you are one of the most meticulous teachers at Palo Duro High school a glad to have been under your wing for four years. Although, I had moments when I wanted to have realized the valuable knowledge I have gained in your class.

While my peers were taking less time consuming electives and sleeping, I was up in the mornin practicing on scales and rhythms. At that time, I didn't feel like that class was beneficial to me, feel like I was performing to the standards you had set. There were even times that I wasn't abl the fundamentals and music that you provided me. I felt like dropping band for an easier electiv didn't want to give up. After a few years, I learned that even though you seemed strict and dema you just wanted your students to perform at the level of expectation that the Palo Duro band has earned through the past thirteen years. I eventually changed my practice habits after seeing the fi

Dear Mr. Doughten,

You've said to me many times, "I had a chance to be the Pope once, you know. But I decided to be a band director instead. Now I work with teenagers every day..." Well, Mr. Doughten, I for one am glad that you chose to leave your holy work for later. But who's to say that what you do isn't a great work unto itself? For the past four years, I've gotten to see from you what it means to be a true leader and these are lessons I won't forget for as long as live.

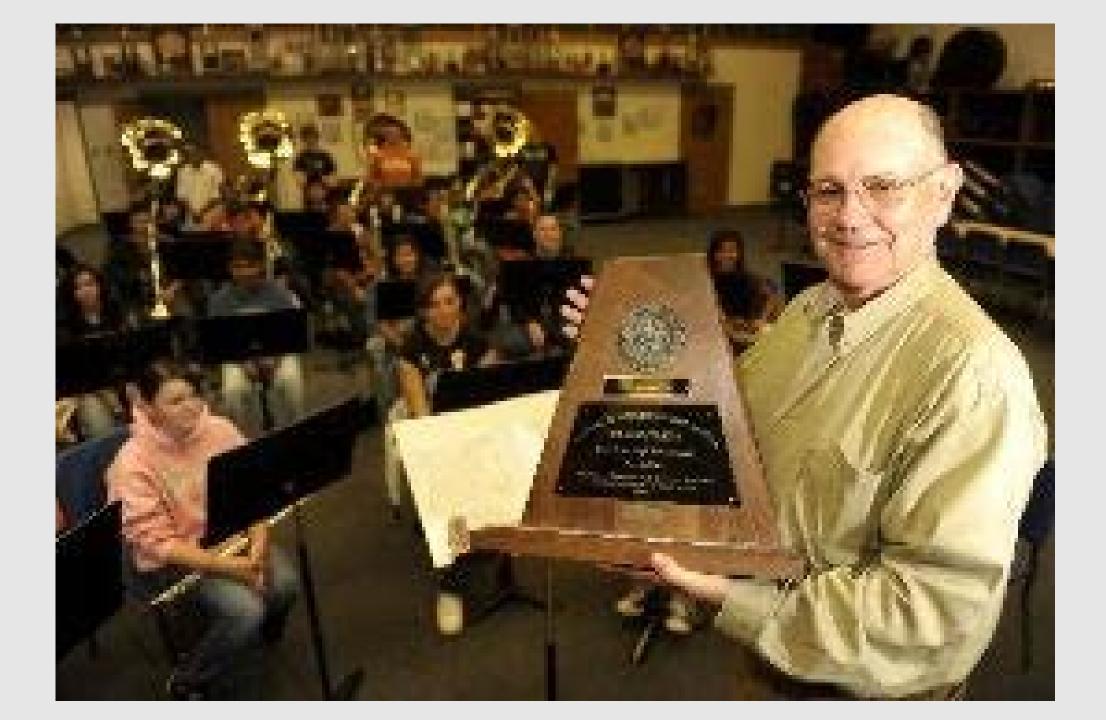

My first day of summer band, I was called out of bed at 8:05 a.m. by the junior drum major of the Palo Duro Band. As I stumbled to the phone, my first groggy and irritated thought was, "Who in the world would call me this early?" Turns out I was about forty minutes late for my first band practice already. Not something a leader does, I must admit. A leader comes early, my first band practice already. Not something a leader does, I must admit. A leader comes early, leaves late, and is always looking for ways to save time and give it in service of others. Like you leaves late, and is always looking for ways to save time and give it in service of others. Like you have done every day I have known you, Mr. Doughten—in health and in sickness.

If you would allow me to quote you, "Hard work is all I know how to do. I'll do everything I can for you guys. Everything! But I can only do so much; the rest is up to you."

Well, you lead and have always led by example and by the strength of your will, Mr. Doughten, and it is that I have been able to emulate and learn from these past four years. Band has definitely and it is that I have been able to emulate and learn from these past four years. Band has definitely and it is that I have ever taken—emotionally, physically, and mentally—but with your been the hardest class I have ever taken—emotionally, physically, and in control of myself than I control of myself than I have been able to become someone much more confident and in control of myself than I control of how to lead people as well as

Through our time under the blistering sun, the freezing wind, and the yelling that came from you when I messed up, you have always been there for me the past years. I know my time in band wasn't the easiest, the most pleasant, nor the fastest, but it is my most precious time on this earth. I truly have to thank you for everything you have done. You kept me and the others on the right path, just like you said "There is only black and white, no grey in the middle." I know for sure that you have become a second father to many of us in band, including me, and you have raised us in your own way. I sometimes mess up, trip and fall, or just plain screw up, but you always are right there to pick me up, and send me back out to try again. There were times I was angry a you, times where I wondered how easy it would have been if I didn't join band, and even times where I just wanted to quit, but you always pushed me back out there and kept me going. I know 1 into me offer four

Changing Lives Through Music: Mr. Doughten

Some of the greatest memories I will always have and cherish from my high school career are the memories of when I was in my High School Band. Being in band was the greatest choice I have ever made in my life. As a freshman, sophomore, and even junior I d d not think this at all. But now that I am a senior and getting ready to leave high school and start a new adventure I have realized how much it means to me to have been around a group of, not only talented musicians, but also kind, intelligent, and really awesome people. While in band I have gotten the opportunity of travel to places I never thought I'd go to during high school (like Washington D.C and even Hawaii) but most importantly I have built strong friendships with some of the most interesting and hardworking people I know. I will never forget those people or the amazing fun times we had together. One person I will never forget, and admire a lot is you Mr. Doughten. When I first met you Mr. Doughten, I'm not going to lie, you scared me. As a freshman every time we were out on the marching field I remember that I would pray that you wouldn't walk past me or work with our section because I was scared that I would be doing something wrong or doing something not quite to your standards. As the days, months, and years went by that started to change. I began to realize that you were tough on us because you wanted us to be successful, and I admired you for that. I have the utmost respect for you because no matter how tough things get you never give up on us. You push your students to be the best they can be, and you won't accept any less. You made me become a strong person,
